

STAVANGER

Home to Preikestolen and the Lysefjord

So close to the European continent and Great Britain! Conveniently located in the south-western corner of Norway, Stavanger is indeed the shortcut to the Norwegian fjords. Nothing is far away, and cruise ships dock in the city centre. Just a short walk away are the lovely cathedral and the charming city centre with its cobbled pedestrian streets. The landscape in the region varies between fjords, beaches and steep mountains. The Lysefjord and the Pulpit Rock are just an hour's boat trip away from the city.

ATTRACTIONS/EXCURSIONS

The city centre
The charming city centre consists mainly of shops in wooden houses and narrow, cobbled streets. Shops and shopping centres offer a wide variety of topquality products and famous brands. There are several museums located within walking distance from the cruise pier. There is ample scope for Tax Free Shopping.

Stavanger Cathedral
Built in the Anglo-Norman style in 1125 AD, when the town only had 200 inhabitants, Stavanger Cathedral is a scaled down replica of Winchester Cathedral in England.

Old Stavanger
Old Stavanger is a cluster of 173 small, white, wooden houses built some 200 years ago. Some of them now house craft shops, galleries, and museums. This is also where The Norwegian Canning and Graphic Museum, IDDIS is located.

Swords in Rock
This monument commemorates the big battle that took place in the Viking Age in 872 AD, when Harald Fairhair became Norway's first king.

SHORE EXCURSIONS
Stavanger offers over 50 different shore excursions. A great variety of active tours, like Nordic walking, SUP and bicycle tours. But also, a wide range of sightseeing tours by bus and boat visiting different nature and cultural spots in the region. From local venues who offer tasty treats in scenic surroundings, to shopping destinations with Norwegian design and museums with great storytelling.
